MME. ALBANI.

An Incident In Which Patti Auswered Remark About Her.

To a writer in The Woman at Home Mme. Albani has been giving some details of her life. "My voice is a certain amount of care to me, "she said. "You think that it always sounds fresh and clear?" Well, I watch over it and never allow it to become tired if I can help it. many hours beforehand, besides which netimes, between the acts of an opera, I take, through a straw, a cup of bouilfind very restorative."

Mme. Albani could sing any tune sung to her long before she could speak. "My sister," she added, "will tell you that she distinctly remembers my first soprano note-a real note, long sustained. We were playing together in our cot in the early morning before the household were astir, and, baby though she, too, was, she has not forgotten the effect made upon her. At 8 years old I actually entered the musical profession. Ah, do not laugh! It is true. I made a little 'tournee' of some months' duration and was much petted and spoiled wherever I went. Then a few years later I was engaged to take the soprano solo at a

There is a good-and a true-story of how one day Adelina Patti, when walking down Regent street one morning with her first husband, the Marquis de Caux, stopped at the windows of the stereoscopic company. There were shown, side by side, photographs of her-self and the debutante, Mile. Emma Albani. Patti stood close to the window and was unnoticed by a young man lounging in the background. "Look," he exclaimed in a loud and jubilant voice, "at that photograph of Albani. She's the new prima donna, and every body is raving over her. Patti will be nowhere very soon. That's one thing certain!" And Patti, turning round suddenly upon the speaker, made him a swift little courtesy. "Thank you, sir," she exclaimed, her eyes sparkling with mischief. The man was rooted to the spot with amazement. Patti stopped just an instant to enjoy the effect she had created and then tripped off laughing through the crowd on her way homeward.

Exceptionally Honored.

A good old Methodist lady attending service in a suburban Episcopal church last Sunday became happy under the preaching of the word and ejaculated "Glory." She was admonished to keep quiet by two of the brethren and nodded assent, but soon becoming forget-ful responded "Halleluiah." The brethren again called her attention to the annoyance and told her that if she did not keep quiet they would be compelled to remove her. The sermon proceeded, and the old lady, becoming very happy and forgetful of her surroundings, shouted out, "Glory to God." This was too much for the brethren and they tried to lead her out, but she refused to walk, so they carried her. On the way che said:

"I am honored above my Master, for while he was carried by an ass I am carried by two."—Philadelphia Record.

Aiways Keep to the Right. The polite dodging that some times occurs between passers in a narrow passage was happily solved once by a tall, ungraceful, bulky Vermonter, who extricated both from the position by saying, "If you will stand still, madam, I will go home." Joseph Ritchie of Roxbury used to tell an experience of his in the days when ladies' gowns trailed on sidewalks and in street cars, and their tempers flashed out if anybody trod upon them. Looking straight at the flushed cheeks and wrinkled forehead, "I excuse you, ma'am," said Mr. Ritrhie, with old school politeness.-Boston Transcript.

SCOUT SHAVE HEAD.

IN INDIAN DUEL AT THE STANDING ROCK AGENCY.

& Grew Out of a Quarrel Over a Quarter of Beef-Crooked Neck Made a Bluff and Was Called Down-Rifles at Thirty Yards and Fight to a Finish.

"A duel which I witnessed in 1876 at Standing Rock agency, Dakota," said an old scout, "between Scout Shave Head and Chief Crooked Neck of the Hunkpapa Sioux was a performance that would have called for applause from the most critical audience that ever witnessed a Spanish bull fight. Shave Head, it will be remembered, was one of the Indian police who was killed while attempting the arrest of Sitting Bull in the fall of 1890. In 1876 I was interpreter and chief of scouts at Fort Yates. near Standing Rock agency, where I had 30 Sioux Indian scouts under my command, who were selected from the friendly bands and quartered at the military post with their families. The military authorities issued rations only to the scouts, while their families drew from the Indian agent. The beef was slaughtered on the east bank of the river, the Indians crossing in boats.

"I usually accompanied the scouts when they went for their beef. About 150 Texas steers were killed every two weeks. These were parceled out to the several bands, beginning with the larger, who would receive 12 or 15 head as their share, the next 10 or 12, and so on to the smaller bands, who would get two or three, according to their number. Lastly, single families, not members of bands, were given beef by themselves, one steer to four families, or a quarter to each. The scouts, half breeds and squaw men were among this num-The trouble which terminated in duel between Shave Head and Crooked Neck began over the issue of "Shave Head, Crooked Neck, Charley Pappan, a half breed, and the Widow McCarty, a squaw who had been married to a white man, were given a quarter each in the last beef issued. Shave Head, Pappan and the widow immediately began skinning the beef, when Crooked Neck approached the scout, and placing his hand on his shoulder pushed him violently aside, saying: 'You belong to the soldiers. You have no right here. Go to the fort for your beef.' "I stood not more than 50 feet away. Shave Head cast one look of defiance at his assailant and then came to me and said, pointing at Crooked Neck: 'That On the days I am engaged to sing at the man has driven me away from my beef. opera I do not talk above a whisper for If I was not under your command, I would know what to do, but now I I believe in careful diet. Tea I forbid await your orders. If you leave me free myself. Bordeaux I find excellent. And to act, he is not man enough to keep me away from my beef.'

"I answered that since the agent had lon made in the French way, which I given him a quarter of that beef it was therefore his, and he had a perfect right to take it.

"Then,' said be, 'tell that man to keep away from me.' I answered that Crooked Neck did not belong to my company, and I had no authority over " 'Very well, 'said the scout. 'I shall take my beef,' and rejoining the others he again offered to assist in dressing the beef, only to be again thrust away by Crooked Neck. This time he gave utterance to that savage growl which, once heard, can never be forgotten, and climbing out of the slaughter pen on the north side, and taking his rifle from is wife, he turned to the left, comit out on that side of the corral facing the river. Crooked Neck, seizing his rifle, went out of the corral on the south side and turning to the right the two combatants met face to face on the wes side of the corral. Between them was the agency wagon, which was backed up to the fence to receive the beef. The first shot was fired by Chief Crooked Neck over the rear end of the wagon. The driver, supposing that he was the object of attack, frantically whipped up his mules, leaving a clear field between the two enraged warriors, who were no more than ten yards apart. Talk about an Indian war dance! Here was execut ed a dance that surpassed anything of the kind I ever saw. Shave Head was from side to side, rearing high in the air and again bending low down to the ground, all the time keeping his eye fixed on his foe and his gun ready for use. The corral had been surrounded by not less than 1,000 Indians, men, women and children, but when the fir ing began they had surged to one side. leaving the space in the rear of each combatant clear. "The second shot was again fired by Crooked Neck, but he again missed his mark, and during the instant required by him to throw another cartridge into his piece Shave Head, who was still as a statue, took aim and fired. The ball struck Crooked Neck in the hip, which crippled him so that he had but one leg to dance on. As soon as Shave Head fired he resumed his dancing, keeping it up until his antagonist fired again, when he repeated his former tactics, pausing in his dance while he took aim and fired This time he brought Crooked Necl down with a bullet through his breast. He fell forward on his face, his gun under him. His friends pressed forward, holding up their hands and calling upon the scout to desist. He had killed his

"But Shave Head was determined to make it a sure thing. First pointing his gun toward the crowd to warm them back, he advanced to the prostrate Indian, and holding the muzzle of his gun within two feet of his victim fired three shots into his head. He then resumed his dancing, and facing the crowd he moved backward to the river, and leaping into a boat was rowed to the west side, where I found him later away out on the prairie performing the Indian rite for purification after shedding blood."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Almost an Accident. 'Speaking of narrow escapes," observed Mr. Chugwater, reaching for his second cup of coffee, 'did I tell you I was on a train the other day that came within three feet of being run into by another train going at full speed?"

"For mercy's sake, no!" exclaimed Mrs hugwater. "How did it happen?" Chugwater. "The train that came so near running into ours," he rejoined, buttering a biscuit, "was on the other track and going

The Millionaire Miner's Free and Easy Way of Getting Information

Senator Fair was rarely known to dis charge a miner. A parent could not have been kinder to them. Smoking was forbidden in the mines. Fair had a free and easy way of dropping down the shafts at unexpected hours and making himself agreeable. One night he smelled tobacco smoke in a crosscut. Smiling and paternal, the senator seated himself on a chunk of ore and chatted with his "Dear me," he said presently, "it's really a treat to get down here among ye an away from all the busines bothers on the surface. D'ye know, I'd jist like to have a smoke? Do any o' you chaps happen to have a pipe wi'

Miner Smith, a new hand, eagerly drew a pipe from a hole in the rock, and his millionaire friend and employer puffed away at the cutty, and when departed left his blessing behind him

"Brown," said the senator to superintendent half an hour later in office, "discharge that man Smith wh workin in crosscut No. 3 on the 2,4 He's been smokin."

A body of rich ore was struck in drift, and speculative reasons made necessary to hide the news from public for a few days. The senator. his flannel shirt and oilskin bat, down with the resting miners in drift, and picking a piece of rock from passing car remarked: "That's pretty good stuff. Don't y think so, boys?" There was a murmur of respectful sent from a few.

"What do you think of it, Johnson Miner Johnson, who was acquain with Fair's ways, examined the re critically, shook his head and said looked barren to him. Several others did the same. Miner Murphy, a comparative tenderfoot, saw an opportunity to dis-tinguish himself. "That rock, sir, will go all the way from $150 to $300 a ton.'

"Ah," murmured the senator admiringly, "you're a miner, Murphy. You anderstand your business." Then to the superintendent in the office presently: Brown, discharge Murphy from that drift. He knows too much."-Chicago Inter Ocean.

TENNYSON'S FLOWERS.

The Poet Makes Many References to Bear tiful Blossoms In His Works.

Tennyson speaks of "a skin as clean and white as privet when it flowers,' and truly the privet, with its prim leaves and small, white flowers, looks like a very Puritan for neatness and simplicity. References to the flowers of our gardens, of course, abound, and many will occur at once to the Tennyson reader. The rose and the lily play more than a commonplace part in "Maud," where indeed all the flowers are interested spectators of the drama. Passages such as

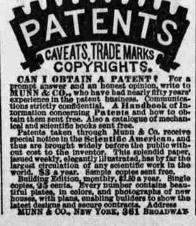

A walk of roses ran from door to door, A walk of lilies crossed it to the bower, from the "Idylls," might have been written by many others, and bell flowers, though we may be grateful to Tennyson for preserving the old fashioned name "Canterbury bells," are easily paralleled from many poets. Perhaps the beautiful line, "Love, like an Alpine harebell, hung with tears," deserves an especial mention. He has written a poem to the snowdrop, which is styled "February Fair Maid," and it forms a fitting part of his picture of "St. Agnes" which, as W. E. Henley has pointed out, is so dazzlingly pure in its whiteness and a contrast to Kents' brilliantly colored poem on the same sub-

Of the early spring, with its violets, primroses and crocuses, our poet is never tired and has avowed his especial love for April, being an Elizabethan in this, as in many other things, so that it is surprising to find comparatively little mention of the daffodil. It is hardly to be found anywhere, except in "Maud" and the "Sonnet to the Nineteenth Century," "Here in this roaming moon of daffodil and crocus." Perchance Tennyson felt that it had been so fully celebrated elsewhere as to become hackneyed in spite of all its beauty.—Good Words.

Heat of Incandescent Lamps. It has been shown that cotton wool cotton cloth and black silk would be set on fire in two to six minutes if saturated with india rubber and packed around an electric glow lamp of 32 candle power, but would not take fire if not satu rated with india rubber. Captain Exler has now found that a 16 candle lamp, sunk in paraffin, reaches a maximum temperature of 94 degrees C., and a 25 candle lamp 101 degrees C. (213 degrees F.). A layer of gunpowder, ecrasite or pulverulent pyroxylin was not set on fire, but when spread on wood or other material opaque to heat rays the ecrasite melted, the gunpowder lost its sulphur, and its niter melted, the pryoxylin darkened and the wood charred. With two lamps in a cavity of wood the temperature rose to 215 degrees C., still without igniting the explosives, however. The breaking of a lamp did not explode pryoxylin or gunpowder, but fired an explosive gaseous mixture.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Eggs.

When choosing eggs, apply the tongu to the larger end of the egg, and if it feels warm it may be relied on as being fresh. Another mode of ascertaining the freshness of an egg is to hold it to the light, and if the egg looks clear it will be good; if thick, it is stale, and if there is a black spot attached to the shell it is worthless.
